Description

Provide a short description of the event and its activities.

The event was organised as a one-day participatory workshop attended by 30 participants, including young people from the local community, representatives of civil society and other interested community members. The workshop was moderated by Tihana Marković, PhD in Law, from the Centre for Entrepreneurship Osijek. Building on the previous workshop, the event aimed to clarify the role and functioning of the Youth Council of the Municipality of Erdut and encourage youth participation in local decision-making.

Through interactive activities and group discussions, participants explored ways to improve communication between the Youth Council and young people, make relevant information more accessible and create opportunities for young people to share their opinions and contribute to local initiatives. Discussions addressed how young people could learn about the Council's activities, communicate their ideas and get involved in initiatives relevant to their needs and interests.

A significant part of the workshop focused on further developing the digital guide for the Youth Council. Building on the knowledge gained during the previous workshop, participants went through the different stages of the Council's work and discussed how the guide could make these processes clearer and easier to follow. Proposed content included templates for Council members, guidance on preparing proposals, instructions for submitting ideas and information on opportunities to participate in local decision-making. Participants also explored the information needed to complete the templates and tested their practical use by selecting a topic and preparing a sample proposal. This exercise helped illustrate how practical tools could support the Council's work and make it easier to turn ideas into concrete initiatives. Other suggested elements included clear explanations of the Council's responsibilities, an overview of its activities and guidance on how young people could contact the Council and share their suggestions.

The event concluded with a discussion on the next steps in developing the digital guide and strengthening the role and functioning of the Youth Council. The workshop helped identify practical ways to make the Council's work more accessible, improve communication with young people and encourage their meaningful participation in shaping the local community.
